PLANS NEW ALPHABET TO OUST THE OLD ONE

Prof. Fred Newton Scott Tells Language Body He'll Drop Nine Characters.

More time is to be saved for the stenographer; more space is to be placed at the disposal of the letter writer and thoughts are to be expressed direct, without waste, in a new alphabet adapted to meet the modern demands of scientific management, according to Prof. Fred Newton Scott of the University of Michigan, who presented a simplified phonetic alphabet in an address before the Modern Language Association in Mandel Hall at the University of Chicago.

Will Shorten Alphabet.
The alphabet, which is said to have the approval of type manufacturers and typewriter houses, is intended to reduce the modern English alphabet by nine characters and do away with combinations which, Prof. Scott declares, are cumbersome, wasteful and complicated and do not express clearly the thought of the speaker or writer.

"The design for a new alphabet that I have drawn," said Prof. Scott, "is to take the place of the present English alphabet and no attempt—at least for the present—has been made to adapt it either to ordinary or to stenographic writing. Our present system of writing and spelling is vague, cumbersome and wasteful of time. Since we have devoted so much energy and thought to time-saving devices, why not save time in that which would benefit nearly every man and woman, especially those in business.

Calls Elements Simple.
"The elements of the alphabet that I have designed are simple. For a consonant a perpendicular stroke, stem or column would be used, to which may be added horizontal projections at the top, middle and bottom, while a dash or broken circle would represent vowels. Each of these marks will have one meaning when they are light and another when they are heavy. The system resembles shorthand in one respect, yet the simplicity of the entire proposition is such that no one need devote a great deal of study in order to master its meaning.

"Simple vowels are represented by a dash, while rounded vowels would be marked by a circle with the open vowels heavy and closed ones light. A horizontal dash, for instance, placed in front of the stem would mean a simple vowel, while the back position would be represented by a vertical dash and the intermediate position by an inclined dash.

Would Be Benefit, He Says.
"It is understood and perfectly patent to me that such a change in our alphabet would mean a great revolution in the English language, but when once such a system was established firmly it would be a hundredfold more beneficial than even simplified spelling. What tired business man, at some time of the day or other has not laid down a long letter because the long words and sentences are tiring his brain? What jurist has not at some time or other been entangled in the maze of verbiage until his eyes swim? Yet all of this could be so simplified that writing would take but half the time that it does at present. Type manufacturers and typewriter houses have approved the plan and promise their hearty support for a simplified method of writing English."

Harmonizing methods of language expression as taught in different schools and even in different countries was advocated by Prof. William Gardner Hale, head of the Latin department of the University of Chicago, in his report as chairman of the committee of fifteen, which is an organization representing the National Educational Association, the American Philological Society and the Modern Language Association of America.

THE PANAMA CANAL DRAWING TOURISTS

Steamship companies report a great rush of tourists to the Panama Canal, which should not excite surprise. This is the greatest undertaking of its kind the world has ever seen and decidedly the largest piece of construction work which the United States has to its credit. Moreover, this is the season for travel South, and now is perhaps the best time to view the great interoceanic waterway. A little over a year hence water will be let into the canal, and when that occurs much of the hum of industry along the line will cease.

At present the great locks are visible, the giant machines are throbbing at their labor, the thousands of workers are busy and the countless forms of activity incident to the construction of the big ditch can now be seen at their best. A few weeks later hot weather will set in, and by next winter the scene may not be so picturesque. It is an inspiring sight and one that must thrill every American with pride as he looks on and thinks that this vast undertaking has not been productive of even a whisper of scandal. The canal is an American masterpiece.

That the battleship New Hampshire narrowly escaped sinking at the Brooklyn navy yard has just leaked out from unofficial sources.

That Little Hacking Cough

Hard coughs are bad enough, to be sure. But it's often the little, hacking, tickling, persistent cough that means the most, especially when there is a history of weak lungs in the family. What should be done? Ask your doctor. He knows. Ask him about the formula on the label of every bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Ask him if this medicine has his full approval for throat and lung troubles. Then do as he says.
